

BOOK 2020

Undine Giseke, Martina Löw, Angela Million, Philipp Misselwitz, Jörg Stollmann (eds.)

Urban Design Methods
Integrated Urban Research Tools

Urban Design Methods is a manual for reconciling contemporary approaches with increasingly complex demands in the shaping of urban living spaces. Architects and landscape architects, as well as city, regional, and landscape planners, often find that they are unable to do modern projects justice with their specialist skills alone. Cooperative approaches are needed to deal with both the complexity of raising questions and the growing number of affected parties who need to be involved.

B.1–27

URBAN DESIGN METHODS

Integrated Urban Research Tools

Edited by Undine Giseke,
Martina Löw, Angela Million,
Philipp Misselwitz, Jörg Stollmann

jovis

Urban design—understood as an inter- and transdisciplinary field at the interface of architecture, city and regional planning, landscape architecture, sociology, and the diverse stakeholders involved in any project—requires a compendium of adaptable methods to dissolve the boundaries between theory and praxis and between natural and social systems. For the first time, this book collects a broad spectrum of methods intended to support urban designers in deciphering the contexts in which they work, and help them attain a greater individual professional understanding. It clearly outlines the range of challenges and the constantly evolving areas of activity.

Get the book here.

Have a look inside the book here.